Is Selected as Red Room Featured Member, Enters Top 1% of Red Room Member Page Views, & Her Novel Re-enters Kindle Bestseller List, All In Same Week

Author April L. Hamilton joined Red Room, an online hub for writers, a little over a month ago in order to raise her visibility in mainstream publishing. "I'm not looking to make the transition from indie author to mainstream publication," Hamilton says, "but I believe indie authors should be no less 'legitimate' in the eyes of mainstream publishing than indie filmmakers and musicians are in their industries." The decision paid off when Hamilton was selected as a Red Room Featured Member for the week of July 21-27. "I was very surprised to see my photo and a link to my Red Room page on the Member Home page, because I haven't publicized my membership there at all," said Hamilton. More good news came on July 26th, as Hamilton's comic novel Adelaide Einstein re-entered the list of Amazon Kindle Top 10 Bestsellers in the 'Motherhood' category. Capping off the week, on July 28th Hamilton's Red Room page rank rose to #96 out of a total of 7,952 member pages, placing it in the top 1% of most-often viewed member pages on the site. According to Red Room, rankings are calculated according to the "total number of unique visitors," which excludes repeat visits. Hamilton muses, "I don't know who all these visitors are or how they found my Red Room page, but since I'd like to keep them coming back I've begun a new, exclusive series of humorous essays called Lies, All Lies! there. In the series, I aim to expose women to the unvarnished truth about things like body image, sexuality, pregnancy, childbirth and motherhood."
